What's new in Paperless for Windows 2.3?

Customer Service - 2024-04-29 - What's New?

Here is what's new in Paperless for Windows 2.3:

- Resolved an issue where, if a value was added to a text field that had not previously been used in a library, previously-entered data would be removed from the selected library items for the field the new values were entered to

- Resolved an issue where Paperless did not import searchable/ selectable text from PDFs verbatim

- Updated several button icons and glyphs used within the program. These things now resemble Paperless for Mac more closely

- Changed the way that Paperless handles color preferences. Now Paperless only applies color preferences to graphical view types (such as Icon View and Combo View); under grid-type views (such as Detail View and the bottom portion of Combo View), the background will display as white, and the text will display in black
