

Mariner Software

Portal > Knowledgebase > MacJournal for Mac OS > Can I move my Microsoft OneNote data into MacJournal?

Can I move my Microsoft OneNote data into MacJournal?

Jim Henson - 2019-02-19 - in MacJournal for Mac OS

Can I move my Microsoft OneNote data into MacJournal?

Yes. OneNote can export its contents into the Microsoft Word .DOC file type. MacJournal, can import through the translation that is provided in the TextEdit engine we use in MacJournal.

Instructions as provided by the Microsoft One note support page:

How to export from OneNote 2007

To export OneNote 2007 files, follow these steps:

On the File menu, click Save As.

In the Save as type box, click OneNote Sections (*.one).

Select only this file type:

Microsoft Office Word (*.doc)

Click Save.

As indicated on the OneNote support page, there appears to be no serious export from OneNote 2003 except to an MHTML file, viewable in a web browser. At the time of this writing, MacJournal does not support viewing of HTML files.