

Mariner Software

Portal > Knowledgebase > Montage > I have a Final Draft script I have been working on for some time. What is the process of importing my script into Montage?

I have a Final Draft script I have been working on for some time. What is the process of importing my script into Montage?

Jim Henson - 2019-10-16 - in Montage

I have a Final Draft script I have been working on for some time. What is the process of importing my script into Montage?

To import a Final Draft® file, first select Import from the File menu. In the Import Script dialog, locate and select your Final Draft script. If you would like the script formatted to conform with one of Montage's templates on import, select that format from the Template popup menu in the Import Script dialog. Click the Open button.

At this point, you will be asked if you want to Import Styles from the selected Final Draft document. If you click on Import, Montage will import the styles (element fonts, settings, margins, etc.) that you have set in the original Final Draft document. If you click on Default, Montage will import the text of the Final Draft file, but format it according to the Template you selected in the previous dialog.